

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY POLICY

V.1

March 2022

“Intellectual Property” means the copyright, patent, trademarks, trade names, slogans, documentation, code, trade secrets or database rights, industrial property rights or any other rights in any material and other works made, authored, created, conceived or produced reduced to practice or written form by or for AIS in the furtherance of AIS’s interest and business or in which AIS otherwise has a proprietary interest, and shall include, but is not limited to the following: standards, documents, data, codes, methods, designs, compilation of information, research, plans, clients, suppliers, vendors, consultants, programs, techniques, processes, products and reports.

Member hereby assigns to AIS all right, title and interest throughout the world and universe, including without limitation, all copyrights, trade-marks, trade secrets, patent rights, and any other intellectual property right in and to the materials worldwide, and all intellectual property rights relating thereto in perpetuity.

Member hereby waives his or her moral rights in the materials and the AIS intellectual property rights, including, without limitation, the right to the integrity of the materials and intellectual property rights, the right to be associated with the materials and intellectual property rights, the right to restrain or claim damages for any distortion, mutilation or other modification of the materials and intellectual property rights, and the right to restrain the use or reproduction of the materials and intellectual property rights in any context and in connection with any product, service, cause or institution, effective at the time the particular materials and intellectual property rights are created.